"Nurse", "Good evening! My name is Sarah, and I'm a nurse here in the ER. Can you tell me your name and what brought you in today?"

"Patient", "Hi, I'm John. I came in because I've been having severe chest pain for the last hour."

"Nurse", "I'm sorry to hear that, John. On a scale from 1 to 10, how would you rate your pain?"

"Patient", "It's about an 8. It feels tight and sometimes radiates to my left arm."

"Nurse", "Thank you for sharing that. Have you experienced any shortness of breath, dizziness, or sweating?"

"Patient", "Yes, I felt a bit dizzy and I've been sweating a lot."

"Nurse", "Okay, that's important information. Do you have any medical history we should know about, like heart problems or high blood pressure?"

"Patient", "I have high blood pressure, and I take medication for it. No history of heart problems, though."

"Nurse", "Thank you for that. Are you currently taking any medications or have any allergies?"

"Patient", "I take lisinopril for my blood pressure, and I'm not allergic to anything."

"Nurse", "Great, thank you. I'm going to take your vital signs now and then we'll get you into a room for further evaluation."

"Patient", "Okay, thank you."
